General Guides

**Academic Live Search**. (Microsoft) The Academic Live Search is still early in its beta phase, but it is a very fine tool. Academic Live Search's two-panned interface is better than Google Scholar and also offers more exporting options for the user. Microsoft has created a closer connection with publishers so that publishers get to choose what information is actually shown in the search. [SBL Forum. The Wired Scholar: Five Free Tools you may not know about. ]

Bible, Judaism, Christianity via Google Book Search

The Wired Scholar: Five Free Tools you may not know about. ]

**Google Books** Google Books, . . . , continues its aggressive effort to digitize books and make them available for public searching. A Google executive has stated that they aim to make every book ever published full-text searchable within ten years. This developing resource has already made itself indispensable, and its value will only increase. Included within this effort are journals bound as books. [SBL Forum. The Wired Scholar: Five Free Tools you may not know about. ]

**Google Scholar** Google Scholar is a heavily used search tool that indexes the vast majority of periodicals that are available online. Google Scholar also indexes the articles themselves, if they are available online, although a user needs to have access through a library or personal subscription to read or download them. [SBL Forum. The Wired Scholar: Five Free Tools you may not know about. ]

**ETANA and ABZU** ought also to be mentioned: ETANA makes available a large number of quality texts related to ancient Near Eastern Studies, and ABZU catalogs over four hundred freely available online books, articles, and websites related to the ancient Near East. [SBL Forum. The Wired Scholar: Five Free Tools you may not know about. ]

Online Searching

Sally Jo Shelton has created a custom search engine Theological Journals Search using Google which presently searches 311 sites

<http://www.google.com/coop/cse?cx=018443097211386924752%3Aluw15uy2qbe>. It includes missions and theology.

The site of Religious and Theological Abstracts <http://www.rtabst.org/> allows you to do a limited free search.
